Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

BECAUSE the editors of the student publication the Reveille sought to criticize Senator Huey P. Long the Louisiana State University censored the paper, and when its editorial staff protested publicly and violently, the rebellious students were suspended from school. Is this political tyranny? Is it true censorship, and does it actually threaten the liberty of the American press? I read these charges in the telegrams of fellow student editors in other states, to the Reveille staff. I read them even in the editorial columns of supposedly sober commercial newspapers—and I can't help but think how silly "Kingfish" Long is making these students and grownup editors look.

24 New Criminal Bills Proposed by Law Commission

Auxiliary Jury Lists Would Be Used by Judge, Not Sheriff

AUTOMATIC REVIEW

Would Review Death Convictions Regardless Whether or Not Appealed

LITTLE ROCK.—Twenty-four separate bills to change Arkansas' criminal laws will be prepared by Governor Futrell's Criminal Code Committee, Robert A. Leflar of Fayetteville, secretary, announced Friday.

The committee also will request the legislature to submit one or more constitutional amendments to strengthen the criminal laws.

The committee met here Wednesday and spent the day working on proposed measures to be submitted to Governor Futrell first and then to the legislature.

Chairman Abe Collins of De Queen appointed Mr. Leflar and B. E. Ishell of De Queen as a subcommittee to compile recommendations of the committee and to draft the necessary bills. Circuit Judge W. J. Waggoner of Lonoke and W. G. Dinning of Helena are other members of the committee.

Attorney General-elect Carl E. Bailey has promised his full support of the committee's program, Mr. Leflar said.

Practically unanimous.

"It is admitted by the committee that some lawyers and laymen will differ honestly as to the desirability of some of the proposed changes," Mr. Leflar said. "There were some such differences of opinion among the members of the committee. However, no proposed change was accepted by the committee unless it was favored by at least four of the five members. Unanimous approval was given all except four or five of the proposals.

Bills to be drafted would make the following changes:

1. Remove the incompetency of husband and wife to testify for or against each other but preserve their privilege as to confidential marital communications.
2. Provide for waiver of jury trial in all criminal cases, on an agreement of prosecuting attorney and defendant.
3. Permit the admission in evidence on new trial of the transcript of all evidence properly admitted at the first trial.

Hope Postoffice Assumed Saturday by Robert Wilson

J. A. Davis Closes Books on 26 Years of Post-office Service

FIRST SINCE WAR

Democrat Is Postmaster First Time Since Wilson Administration

Robert M. Wilson, member of the Reed-Routon merchandising firm here since the close of the World war, took over the postmastership of the Hope postoffice late Saturday.

Mr. Wilson succeeds J. A. Davis, who has been a member of the Hope postoffice staff for 26 years and five months. Mr. Davis has served as a Republican postmaster since March 16, 1922. His last appointment expired in July this year, but he retained the office until his Democratic successor was appointed.

Mr. Wilson will be the first Democratic postmaster since the administration of the war president, Woodrow Wilson.

Mr. Davis did not announce his plans for the future.

Urge Support of the Bankhead Law

State Commissioners Uphold It in New Orleans Conference

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—Cotton farmers were urged to vote on December 14 for continuation of the Bankhead cotton control act during 1935 by commissioners of agriculture of the Southern states at their conference here Friday.

Conceding that the cotton control bill has some imperfections, the agricultural leaders said in a resolution unanimously adopted that the bill offers the best means available for curtailing "unusual" overproduction. The commissioners favor continuation of production control after 1935.

The resolution urged a permanent cotton policy which will "definitely control cotton production, maintain domestic cotton price levels in keeping with American standards of living with parity price as the objective and preserve export trade on the basis of equal competitive price."

The commissioners, called together by Louisiana's commissioner, Harry D. Wilson, agreed that inequalities of the Bankhead bill should be eliminated as they affect the small "one and two-bale" cotton farmer.

The resolution recommended that the secretary of agriculture be authorized to determine from year to year the world requirements of American cotton and allot the number of bales required to the states on the basis of each state's production in the years 1928-1932, "which shall be allotted to counties and to farms on the basis of the maximum percentage of cultivated land which may be devoted to cotton production."

G. C. Adams, agricultural commissioner of Georgia, said he saw no immediate threat of foreign competition for Southern cotton growers, "because they cannot produce the grade of cotton we grow in any threatening proportions."

"I had rather not have any export trade in cotton if it means producing it below cost," he said.

U. S. Outgo Twice Amount of Taxes

But Government Outlay Is Less Than President's Forecast

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The government is pouring out cash at a rate which threatens to surge for past last year's outlay of $7,105,650,000 and deficit of $3,989,196,000.

Without counting what new emergency demands President Roosevelt's January budget may include, another heavy midwinter relief drain may shoot the year's aggregate cost above $8,000,000,000.

In five months and five days of the 1935 fiscal year, the government has spent $3,033,368,000, or better than a billion ahead of last year's corresponding figure of $2,029,808,000. The deficit piled up since July 1 is $1,515,931,000 or nearly $700,000,000 above a year ago.

The spending has been $2 for every dollar of receipts.

This financial outlook, however, still would leave the Treasury below Mr. Roosevelt's spending estimate of $16,529,805,000 in 1934-35 and of a two-year deficit, or increase in the public debt, of $9,295,201,000. Fulfillment of this forecast would push the public debt to approximately $31,831,000,000 next June 30.

L. S. U. President Is Hanged in Effigy for Student Rally Ban

Irate Students Suspected of Placing Effigy on Flagpole in Center of Campus

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Dr. James M. Smith, president of Louisiana State University, was hanged in effigy Saturday from a flagpole in the center of the campus.

The identity of those involved in the effigy affair was undetermined, but the hanging was reported to have been the outgrowth of Smith's refusal to permit a student meeting Friday for the purpose of discussing Huey Long's censorship of the Reveille, campus newspaper.

Long Turns to Utilities

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Dictator Huey Long Friday took charge of the investigation he had ordered into public utility rates.

Members of the Louisiana Public Service Commission, all henchmen of Long, reorganized by electing Wade O. Martin chairman and at the request of Long ordered an investigation into electric and telephone rates.

Long was made special attorney to the commission to prosecute the investigation. The utility companies were cited to appear before the commission on December 13 to show cause why their rates should not be investigated and to come prepared to pay the expense of the investigation.

Three utility companies were cited to appear, the New Orleans Public Service, Inc., the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., and the Baton Rouge Waterworks company.

Long announced that he had left it up to Dr. James M. Smith, president of Louisiana State University, to settle the row that has resulted from Long's censorship of the "Reveille," official university newspaper, which was forbidden to print anything criticizing Long.

Students of Louisiana State attempted without avail to hold a mass meeting in the gymnasium to discuss the expulsion of two students of journalism and suspension of five other students who fought censorship, and

Bankhead Wins Straw Vote Easily

Count Is 50 to 5 From Producers Averaging 7 Bales Production

With 55 ballots returned to The Star up to Saturday noon the newspaper straw vote indicated that southern Arkansas' cotton producers would uphold the measure by an overwhelming vote in the federal referendum to be held next Friday, December 14.

Tabulation of the 55 ballots showed 50 for the Bankhead Law, and 5 favoring its repeal.

The vote for compulsory crop control in general was, 48 for, and one against.

The return of 55 ballots was against a "possible" of 2,000, the number of farm subscribers to the daily Star.

Of the 55 producers reporting, 37 were landowners, and 18 were tenants, practically all were small producers, one reporting total production as high as 60 bales, another 25 bales, but most of them ranging from two and three bales to five and six.

Nine of the 55 failed to show cotton acreage or production by bales.

The 46 who did show these figures, accounted for 927 acres and a total cotton production of 307 bales—an average of slightly less than seven bales per farmer.

Local W. O. W. Is Headed by Crosby

Hope Camp Will Distribute Gifts to Needy Children of City

Officers have been elected by Bois d'Arc Camp, Woodmen of the World, for the next year as follows:

J. T. Crosby, camp commander; T. C. Bryant, advisor; lieutenant, W. B. Boyett, banker; John Ridgill, clerk; W. F. Garner, escort; Earl Bowden, watchman; L. S. Mauldin, secretary.

This is the 20th consecutive year for Mr. Ridgill as clerk of Bois d'Arc camp. The local camp is one of the largest in the state in point of membership.

As is the usual custom, the members of the local camp will dispense Christmas cheer among the more unfortunate children of the city by distributing fruits and candies on Christmas day, to be delivered by truck. A committee composed of T. R. Bryant, John Ridgill, J. A. Cupp, W. F. Garner and S. W. Kennedy, will have charge of procuring names, collecting presents and the distribution. They will be assisted by the entire membership.

League of Nations Sends International Army to Watch Polls

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—France dramatically resumed discussion of a general European conflict before the League of Nations council Saturday with the declaration of Foreign Minister Pierre Laval that "in this grave affair France stands besides Yugoslavia."

Laval said that in striking King Alexander it was peace which the assassins hoped to destroy.

"It was the work of Alexander they sought to destroy," said Laval. "This work subverts and depends on us as the council of the League of Nations—to see that peace shall not be placed in peril."

Union Labor Test for General Motors

Years on "Investigation Choice as to Their Representatives"

DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—A plan to insure the thousands of employees in the nation's gigantic automobile industry a fair opportunity, without fear of intimidation, to elect their own representatives to bargain Friday night by the president's Automobile Labor Board.

The board, composed of Dr. Leo Wolman, Nicholas Kelley and Richard L. Byrd, disclosed that within a few weeks the first of a series of plant elections would be held. The plant selected for the first test is the Cadillac division of the General Motors corporation here.

The elections plan guarantees employees, under supervision of staffs named by the board, the right to vote for any man to represent him in dealings with his employer, regardless of whether that person is at least mildly insane, Prof. Harry M. Johnson, psychologist in the graduate school of American University, told the Sigma society, honorary scientific fraternity at the University of Virginia Friday night.

"The tired person may show every characteristic symptom of some form of insanity and not always in a mild degree," continued Dr. Johnson, explaining his seven years of work investigating sleep at the Mellon Institute.

Chininess, inattention, disturbances of speech, lapses of memory, headstrong persistence, momentary hallucinations, occasional delusion, wanton ruthlessness, and temper tantrums all are common symptoms of fatigue, although they may not all occur at once," he said.

Dr. Johnson compared a tired person with an automobile engine. Fatigue does not impair a person's performance of any psychological test until he is almost ready to collapse, just as an engine fed by a fuel tank does not slow down until the reserve fuel is used up.

4 Die in Tenement Fire in New York

Water Turns to Ice as It Falls on Blazing 5-Story Building

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Four persons lost their lives in a fire which swept a five-story tenement house in the Bronx Saturday.

Four persons were injured, one a 71-year-old crippled woman, so seriously that she may die.

The dead were:

MRS. CATHERINE GIBNEY, 36.

JOHN L. LAWRENCE, 2, her son.

MRS. MINNIE JOHNSON, 67.

Firemen were hampered when the water they poured onto the fire turned into ice.

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The State Refunding Board voted Saturday to refer all pending claims to the courts of proper jurisdiction for adjudication before final action is taken by the board.

TULSA, Okla.—(AP)—W. De-laney, 53, for whom a search was made Friday after fears were expressed that he had been kidnapped, returned home Saturday. He explained he had been detained on a business trip.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—This year's cotton crop was estimated Saturday by the Department of Agriculture in its final report of the season to be 5,731,000 bales. Arkansas' production was estimated at 875,000. Arkansas gained 823,092 bales.

JACKSON, Miss.—(AP)—The Jackson City Commission seeking to bring Tennessee Valley Authority power here, appealed to the voters Friday with a flood of pamphlets describing the rate controversy with the Mississippi Power & Light Co. and urging support for a proposed $1,500,000 mortgage bond issue to erect a municipal power plant and distribution system.

The commission's fight with the power company dates back six months ago when the city declined an offered 10 per cent rate reduction as inadequate. The controversy was climaxed earlier this week when the commission summarily ordered reductions ranging from 35 to 30 per cent, and called a special election on the bond issue for January 19.

Twenty-four-page pamphlets were placed in every home on the cover in bold black type was the following: "A new deal with TVA rates for Jackson with no increase in taxes."

The pamphlets contained cards giving the customer's bill for October, 1933, as paid to the Mississippi Power & Light Co.; what the bill would have been under TVA rates, and savings under TVA.

Representatives of the power company conferred during the day with the commission. It was reported that both sides still were seeking a compromise.

Harvey C. Couch of the power company has declared that his concern "cannot possibly" operate under the city's prescribed rates, and indicated if a compromise were not reached the company would appeal to the courts.

Freezing Is Again Forecast Sunday, and Then Warmer

Low of 30 Degrees Is Prediction for Little Rock Sunday

COLD HITS NATION

Winter Strikes Early and Hard in All Sections of U. S. A.

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Arkansians shivered Saturday as they arose to find temperatures registering below the freezing point.

Weather reports indicate the cold spell would continue for at least another day as the mercury dropped to 22 degrees here for the lowest reading of the year.

Fort Smith reported 22; Paragould 20, and Memphis 23.

The Weather Bureau here expected a minimum of 30 for Sunday morning.

The Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station reported a minimum of 21 degrees for Hope Saturday morning—the lowest for the year.

Winter storms and zero chills smote the Northern state from the Cascades to the Adirondacks Friday.

On the western slope of Snoqualmie Pass in Washington a tree felled by the mountain wind crashed upon a double decked motor bus, killing three men and injuring a woman.

An 82-year-old farmer froze to death in a cornfield near Sioux City, Ia., where the temperatures were near zero.

In Michigan five persons died of burns when stoves became overheated and a "sixth" was the victim of an accident while shoveling snow.

An elderly woman died of pneumonia in the Wisconsin north woods, and a woodsman trekked miles through the snowdrifts to pull her body back to civilization on a sled.

A bright sun, blinding on the fresh snow that overlaid most of the Middle Western plains, started temperatures up from below zero in Minnesota, the Dakotas and neighbor states to the South, but the zero spell was spreading eastward across Michigan and on into the East.

Rochester, Minn., held bottom place with 24 below zero Friday, while Bemidji warmed up to 7 below. It was 10 above in the twin cities of Minnesota.

The temperature was 13 below at Brookings and Mason City and 14 under at Decorah, Ia. It was 11 above at Omaha, with fresh snow. Clear and warmer was the prospect.

The mercury neared the freezing point at Washington, D. C., and it was below freezing in Kentucky, with light snowfall welcomed by the tobacco raisers.

The mercury fell to one degree under zero at Manhattan, Kan., and in the uplands of New York state, aided by a brisk wind, got down to 8 below at Owls Head.

A drop to 20 above, coldest of the year, was predicted for Washington. Snow flurries, the first in Alabama this winter, sprinkled northwest Alabama as cloudy skies and a brisk wind combined to drive the temperature down to freezing in most sections during the afternoon.

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Many Body Disorders May Affect Joints

Rheumatic infections make up a large percentage of man's disabilities because of their relationship to heart disease.

Out of 500,000 persons in Massachusetts who suffered from chronic disorders, 138,000 had rheumatism and 3600 of these were totally disabled.

There is no single cause of the various forms of rheumatism disorders, but various disturbances of the body may result in affections of the joints.
Sometimes a disorder of the glands, sometimes disturbance of diet, and, on-casually, constitutional diseases may be at the background of an inflammation of muscles and of joints.

In many cases, an infection which is localized in the tonsils or at the roots of the teeth or in the gallbladder may send infectious material into the joints.

In such cases, obviously, the removal of the place from which the original infection emanates will stop further infections from that source, but will not necessarily heal a joint that is already infected.

Therefore, any one of several causes may be responsible for starting a joint disease or an inflammation of the kind, but later on other disturbances follow and complicate the condition.

It is of utmost importance for a person who has an inflammation of the joints or any other type of rheumatic disorder to learn the primary cause and to attack the disease from this point of view. However, since numerous changes will already have occurred in the tissues of the joints or in other parts of the body, it becomes necessary to treat each patient as an individual and to control each of the abnormal conditions as it is found.

In other words, one must treat the patient and his disease rather than all inflammations of the joints as one type of disease.

For this reason, it is most important for the person with chronic inflammation of the joints to select a physician in whom he has confidence and to be willing to remain under that doctor's treatment for a long time, since chronic inflammations of muscles and joints are not likely to be healed over night.

Once arthritis has been definitely recognized and everything possible done to remove the cause, there are some simple, but important, directions as to the general hygiene of the body.
The diet should be appetizing and include plenty of fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, to supply the necessary amounts of vitamins and fats.

If there is an inclination to believe disagree-with him, he should avoid them.
A chronic disease is usually associated with a poor appetite. For this reason such persons are likely to overeat of sugars. Because of their illness they are unable to take exercise and are, therefore, inclined to put on excess weight.

Furthermore, it has been found by some investigators that reduction of the total amount of sugar and supply of sufficient proteins and fats seem to favor reduction of infection and swelling.

At the same time, this type of diet will supply the necessary vitamins and also enough roughage and similar material to overcome a tendency to constipation.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTON

Book Reveals Allies Tried to Prolong War to Spoil U. S. Influence

That the Allied leaders in 1918 actually hoped to prolong the war until 1920, so "favorable military situations" could be created in secondary theaters of war which would tie the United States' hands at the peace conference, is disclosed by the confidential papers of the late Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, America's representative on the Supreme War Council in 1918.

The revelation is made in "Bliss, or sew in her free time. Her two oldest come in from school to say hello and the baby pulls himself around chairs and tables.

Can Play Without Danger
He can play on uninterrupted and carry out his co-ordination and ideas without damage to property because his mother has put most perishable property beyond his reach.

He is only in his play pen in the morning hours, either outside or inside, depending on weather, or when she goes down town and gets a maid in to look after him.

To all intents and purposes there is little difference between Dora and Stella because in both cases the children are pretty much on their own.

But Dora is full of club news, talk of other people, the shows she sees, the news she hears. She listens to the children's affairs with a detached look —as though it was a compulsory pause in her mental machinery. The children are proud of her looks, her clothes and importance. But there is something wrong—a feeling of being merely "included" as a very small factor in her ready life.

Stella is "background"
Stella's children come in every now and then for a pair of skates, a ball, an apple or a bandage. She knows every friend they have and where they are, generally speaking. In those after-school and Saturday hours.

She expects her husband and children to bring in the news. Her nature is consistent in being satisfied with "proxy" thrills. She is being background for her children and development although she would deny the honor. She would say, "It just suits me to be so."

Fortunate is the family that has such a backstop, provided this mother is not a door-mat or a service bell. The quiet-stay-at-home spirit can lead to tyranny and selfishness on the part of her children.

On the other hand, the "Doras," I think, make a mistake in letting the family feel merely part of routine.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

"My skin is quite smooth and lovely in spring and summer," writes a woman who lives in a cold climate. "But during fall and winter it gets dry and rough. I can't understand why. I do the same routines the year around."

Her last sentence tells the real story.
You can't treat your complexion in the same fashion season in and season out and expect it to react favorably all the time. Climate, after all, has a great deal to do with the condition of any skin.

In winter, the skin perspires less freely and therefore becomes dry and unattractive. You simply have to include a tissue softener in your list of necessities.

There are nourishing creams, of course—rich, nice-smelling ones that are to be patted on face and throat at night after they have been thoroughly cleaned and moistened with a lotion to shrink the pores. Keep on patting until a good deal of the cream is absorbed. Then wipe off the excess. Once a week, leave a little of it on all night.

A foundation lotion will keep cold winds from irritating your skin. Put it on a bit more lavishly than you do in the summertime. If you go in for winter sports, it's a good idea to give yourself a facial, including the patting cream, before you start out. Repeat the treatment when you return.

Lovable

BEGIN HERE TODAY
ANN HOLISTER, pretty and 20, had work in a library. She falls in love with TONY RICKLE, though warned against him by her room-mate, SARAH KENT.

Later Ann meets PETER KEN-DALL, wealthy and prominent and engaged to VALERIA BEN-NETT, society girl. Without Peter's knowledge Valeria goes about with a gay set. One night she attends a party at which a man is shot. Peter, learning how Valeria has deceived him, tells her her engagement is at an end.

The same day Ann breaks her engagement to Tony. She and Peter meet in a restaurant and discuss their mutual unhappiness.
When he asks her to marry him she agrees. They are married that night and set out for Florida.
The first morning after their arrival there Ann goes for an early swim.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV

THE lake was turquoise blue—beautiful and cold, even with the sun pouring warmly down upon it. Ann plunged in and, after the first shock, felt exhilarated.
She struck out with easy, graceful strokes.

Peter, discovering that Ann's door was open, called in. "As soon as you're dressed, breakfast will be ready."

There was no answer.

"Ann!"

Still no answer. A quick survey revealed that Ann was nowhere around. Fear gripped Peter. He was off toward the lake in a run.
Nonsense, Ann wasn't that kind.
Ann was sensible, sane. Half-way he saw her white cap, like a dot on the blue water. He returned to the house, got into his suit and raced back to the pier.

Ann saw him swimming toward her, the long, powerful strokes bringing him rapidly near her. She smiled.

"It's time you got out of this cold water," Peter said.

"You said we would swim on mild days."

"Well, you can't spend the whole day in the lake even on mild days," Peter retorted. "I'll race you in, and give you a good handicap."

Peter caught up and they were swimming along side by side for a while.

He had deliberately slowed after the first burst of speed to prevent her from being too disgracefully outdistanced. They pulled up on the pier and sat in the sun, surveying each other.

The exercise had brought high color to Ann's cheeks. There was a light in her eyes. She thought Peter looked splendid, with his brown hair tousled, his gray eyes smiling a little, drops of water on his strong, tanned arms and legs.

This handsome stranger—he was beginning to seem less strange all the time—was her husband.

"Breakfast was ready when I came out," Peter said.

"The inner man must be satisfied," Ann mocked. She got to her feet, discovering she was hungry.
Too Florida sun, air and water, she realized, might develop an appetite.

"Why didn't you call me?" Peter asked as they walked toward the house.

"I thought you were asleep."

HE scoffed. "Asleep? I've been up for hours, using all my persuasive powers to keep Lena from clattering dishes and Juan from reporting his discovery to the world at large."

"What discovery?"

"A bird nest. The kid is crazy on the subject of birds. Lena tells me he can imitate any bird he's ever heard and some he only imagines he hears."

"Let's go see."

"After breakfast."

"Now."

"No."

Ann got into her clothes, thinking a little about Peter's master-fulness. He had been teasing, but she was sure there were depths of steadfastness and determination in him, not yet uncovered.

"Did you sleep well last night?"
Peter asked as he pulled out her chair at the table.

"Yes. But I dreamed about alligators."

His eyes tensed. "Great Scott!
Couldn't you find something better to dream about?"

Ann did not reply, did not tell him she had dreamed about him, also—and Tony.

After breakfast Peter proposed going out on the lake again. He had a motorboat and an aquaplane.
Had she ever tried aquaplaning?
No. Well then, he would teach her. It was really great sport.

He showed her how to climb upon the board. On her knees, and then put up one foot and then the other. How to brace her feet firmly on the rubber straps and to sway lightly, rhythmically with the motion of the boat. Tenseness was fatal.

And presently Ann, balanced on the board, was flying along behind the boat. Not too swift a pace at first, as Peter turned to watch her progress.

There were several spills. Then Peter would turn the boat around and the lesson would begin again.
Ann was thrilled, unafraid. Peter marveled at her fearlessness and prowlency. She was getting the hang of the thing.

"Faster, Peter!"

All right then. He speeded the boat up. It shot across the water like a brilliant orange streak.

And then, looking back, he saw the board bobbing along without Ann. And very far away it seemed to him during that moment of suspense a blot of white on the water.
It was there one minute and then it disappeared.

PETER let the motor out to the last notch, roaring across the water toward the spot where he had seen the blot of white. It had appeared again and Ann was swimming toward him weakly.

He hauled her over the side of the boat and into his arms. "Lord, Ann. You frightened me."

"I fell off when you turned."

Ann explained when she had recovered her breath. "I went under before I knew it and swallowed a lot of water. I thought I was sunk, Peter."

"So did I!" he said grimly.

Ann felt strangely at peace, resting in his arms, the sun pouring down on her. She closed her eyes.

Peter, looking down, saw her long lashes curled against her wet cheeks. A strand of bright hair had escaped from under the white cap and was lying on her cheek—close to her young, sweet mouth.
Peter brushed the strand away. It was like an electric shock—the touch of his hand on Ann's cool, smooth flesh. His arms tightened violently about her, drawing her closer.

She opened her eyes and saw the muscles around Peter's mouth contract. And then Peter was pulling her up, almost roughly, to a sitting position. He spoke curtly. "You're feeling all right now, aren't you?
Suppose we pull in?"

His face was red. Perhaps, Ann thought, it was from being out in the sun. He was giving all his attention to the motor, having forgotten apparently that she might have drowned back there when he was tearing away from her.

Her sense of humor came to her rescue. How absolutely silly. Did she expect Peter to moon over her like a love-sick idiot? Peter, who was in love with Valeria Bennett.
Of course she didn't.

He had rushed to her and pulled her into the boat very efficiently.
He had been genuinely frightened.
Yes, she had seen that in his eyes.
And gentle. It was strange how gentle Peter, who was so big and rugged, could be.

"For a moment," Ann said, "I was simply scared to death. You seemed a million miles away."

"A hundred yards or so would seem pretty far," Peter said. "If you happened to be drowning."

"But I wasn't drowning," Ann said. "I was swimming when you got there."

"Yes, I know," Peter said, without apparent interest.

ANN stopped talking. Still silent, Peter tied up his boat. Ann walked ahead, expecting him to overtake her. She had reached the porch when she turned and saw him striding toward the house. All the friendliness had vanished from his manner. If he were going to be mean, it would be lonely here.

Peter had tied the boat with swift, savage fingers. Looking up, he saw Ann walking slowly toward the house. He waited until she was near the steps before starting up the path. He told himself that he had acted like a fool. No wonder Ann's eyes had met his in amusement. No use trying to excuse himself. Of course, she was lovely. And she was his wife. He had realized, looking down at her, touching her wet cheek, that she was his wife. He had known that with his objective mind before.
But there in the boat . . . well, there was no use in rehearsing it all again.

Ann was probably disgusted, re-realizing he had gone off his head in that boat.

After dinner, a little chilled by Peter's manner, Ann suggested a game of honeymoon bridge. And then colored a little.

What in the world was the matter with her, being self-conscious like this?

Honey-moon bridge, tame at best, proved anything but diverting to night with Peter answering in monosyllables, making not the least effort to be entertaining.

Blowing hot and cold. Well, let him.

Companionable and kind one minute and cold and formal the next. Ann frankly yawned.

"I'm sleepy," she said.

"Why don't you go to bed?"
"That's where I am going," Ann said. Then she decided that she had sounded curt and rude—like Peter.

"Good night, Peter," she amended politely.

"Good night."

Today's Pattern

THE unique design of the waist of this little frock makes it an outstanding creation. The front yoke with the lace and opening is combined with an easy fullness, and the lacing idea is carried out in the pocket ornaments. Gingham, lightweight wool or cotton fabrics make up beautifully. Patterns are size 4 to 12 years. Size 6 requires 2 yards of 35-inch fabric plus 1-3 yard contrast.

In celebration of the birthday anniversary of Miss Ruth Taylor, the head of the home economic department of the high school, the Home Ec. girls entertained at a very delightful party on Thursday evening. The Home Ec. cottage was elaborately decorated with potted plants and the guests were the women members of the high school faculty. They were greeted by the senior girls, and when the honoree arrived she was presented with a prettily decorated box of dainty handkerchiefs and a lovely corsage. After the presentation they were invited into the dining room where the center of attraction was a huge cake embossed in white frosting and pink rose buds bearing sixteen lighted candles. As the honoree cut the cake, the hostesses served a tempting sandwich plate with hot chocolate.

Mrs. O. A. Graves entertained the members of the Executive Board of the W. M. S. on Friday afternoon at her home on North Washington street.

Mrs. C. C. Lewis entertained the members of the Friday Contract Club and a number of guests on Friday afternoon at her home on South Hervey street.

In keeping with the Yuletide season, the decorations were all in the Christmas color, and a like motif was further evidenced in the bridge necessities and the refreshments. The guests were seated at six tables, with the favors going to Mrs. W. Q. Warren, Mrs. Arthur Swanke, Mrs. C. C. McNeill and Mrs. Guy Card. Following the game the hostess served a delicious salad course.

Mrs. Clyde Yarbrough and little daughter who have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Q. Warren for the past two weeks left Saturday for their home.

charges that it was invoked because of the "dictatorship" of Long over the university. Call for the meeting was posted on the college bulletin boards after students had petitioned James Asenau of Jennings, La., vice president of the Student Council, to call a general meeting for discussion of the Revellie expulsions and suspensions. The student council supported President Smith in his handling of the controversy.

At mid-day hundreds of students began to throng the college gymnasium, but before the meeting got under way they were dispersed. College press from outside states sympathetic with the resigned staff of the Revellie poured in assurances of support.

The outside college press was bitter in its criticisms of the censorship of the Revellie. The Hustler of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, declared the acts of expulsion a "mean and tyrannical attitude" and laid the blame on "Senator Long and his L. S. U. administration."

The Orange and White of the University of Tennessee at Knoxville declared that "this reactionary action at L. S. U. represents a potential threat to college journalism throughout the country," and described the outcome of the controversy as the "blighting touch" of Huey Long.

"If Huey says seat, they must seat," said the Orange and White. The students of journalism at Tulane, New Orleans, adopted a resolution commending the "courageous stand" of the resigned Revellie staff and the L. S. U. journalism students "who supported it."

This should result in more ready trial on the merits of the case, and in fewer cases being thrown out of court because of technical defects in the indictment or in the mode of proof.)

9. Require the selection of auxiliary lists of jurors in each county, these auxiliary lists to be used in the discretion of the judge when the regular jury panel is exhausted. (This provision should eliminate the evil, frequently alleged to exist, of the sheriff selecting as jurors by standards favorable to one side or the other.)

10. Repeal the statute permitting judges to suspend sentences on conviction.

Squash and Turnips Must Be Served Piping Hot to Be at Their Best

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

A woman I know who's just bought a house in the country is giving herself a Christmas present this year of a root cellar. And really and truly, if it were emeralds bestowed by some ravishing Prince Charming, she couldn't be more excited. You see, she gave the cellar to herself early enough to salvage from her own garden squashes, onions, cabbage, turnips, potatoes, sweet and Irish, and all the rest.

Luckily she's a good cook and will serve those root vegetables as they should be served to get the most out of them—steaming hot, well-seasoned and extravagantly buttered.

Squash Last Long
Her winter squash, and yours, too, if you were lucky enough to raise any, will be good until after the first of the year. Squash makes a good Christmas dish, mashed. To prepare a fine Hubbard squash, cut in halves and take until tender. Scoop out pulp and put through ricer. Season well with salt, pepper, plenty of butter and cream. Beat until light, using preferably slotted spoon or electric beater. Reheat, beating to prevent sticking and serve at once.

Sometimes I mash my turnips with dry, meaty potatoes. Cook potatoes and turnips separately and drain both thoroughly. Then add one or two potatoes, depending on the amount of turnip, and mash thoroughly. Season well with salt, pepper, a bit of sugar and plenty of butter. Garnish with coin spots of paprika and serve very hot.

Turnip cups are attractive filled with a vegetable of contrasting color. Boil medium sized turnips until tender and scoop out centers. Dip in melted butter combined with lemon juice and fill with buttered peas. Diced beets also are good in turnip cups. Keep

And squash croquettes deserve to be billed as an extra added attraction whether it's a holiday or ordinary dinner. For them, take two cups cooked and mashed squash, ½ cup finely chopped nut meats, 2 tablespoons cream, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon white pepper.

English walnuts, pecans, hickory nuts and Brazil nuts are the best nuts to use. Combine squash, melted butter, salt, pepper and nuts. Add egg well beaten and cream. Shape into balls or cones and roll in fine dried bread crumbs. Dip in egg slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon milk and roll again in crumbs. Place in a frying basket and fry in deep fat hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread in 40 seconds or 390 degrees F. on a fat thermometer. Fry a golden brown and drain on crumpled paper. These are very easy to make and can be prepared for frying the day before wanted for serving.

Killer whales are not hunted, being comparatively worthless. They are worthless. They are fond of preying on sperm whale, tearing them to pieces and making a meal of the four-ton tongue.

BEHOLD the Stranger!

A stranger moves to your neighborhood. You observe him tolerantly, but with no immediate display of interest. You are an established resident, getting along very nicely before he came.

But you do not avoid him. For reasons not entirely unselfish you wait for him to reveal himself. Possibly he may add something to your social and business life. Possibly he will take a highly respected place in the community. He may even become one of your intimates. It is up to him.

So you note his manners, talk with him, and form an opinion. If he comes up to your requirements, you accept him, and often he proves a welcome addition to your group of friends.

It is with exactly the same attitude that the intelligent newspaper reader regards the advertisements of products new to him. These strangers may add something to his civilized enjoyment. They may contribute to his comfort, safety—even his success. In many ways they may prove valuable. Certainly it is wise to give them careful consideration.

Read the advertisements in this newspaper. They may be the means of introducing you to products that will take important places in your life. And every day they will give you information that enables you to buy intelligently and make your money go farther.
